THEATER DE WAANZIN DEKALOG 10

Dekalog, ten films by Polish film maker Kieslowski, became a hit TV-series on Polish television in iconic year 1989, fall of the Berlin wall. Kieslowski and Piesiewicz wrote 10 scenarios of 50 minutes, each loosely based upon one of the Ten Commandments of the Old Testament.

They depict in each story ordinary people confronted with moral dilemmas. They have to make a choice for their future. They find that the old commandments do not suffice anymore.

Theater de WAANzin and Theater Trac, a fellow Ghent company, played all ten stories in April 2017. Now they present the tenth commandment.

Father Wortel dies, and all his sons Jerzy and Arthur inherit his stamp collection. Both brothers are more than disappointed. When they visit their father's house, which seems a fortified castle (why in God's name) they see lots of series of stamps but meet also with the many debts their father had. They decide to sell the collection. Meanwhile Jerzy takes some of the stamps to give as a remembrance present to his daughter. When the collection is at last estimated on its worth, it seems the brothers have become millionaires. Their lives change drastically, becoming greedy to find other valuable stamps.

Does their greediness make them happy?
